Posted Yesterday 04:03 PM by Nate Martinez

While teasers may be the latest trend among automakers, it does put them in a vulnerable position for internal leaks. Arising on the Web today are what look to be the first uncovered photos of Aston Martin's latest ultra-fast \(and expensive\) One-77 supercar in its full production-ready splendor.

The images, courtesy of Dutch blog 925.nl, clearly show the car's extra-wide stance and intricate carbon fiber bodywork. Characteristic Aston lines -- somewhat reminiscent of a Coke bottle -- permeate the exotic's exterior and are accentuated further by aggressive functional vents and diffusers, both fore and aft. To the sides, the likely gull-wing doors incorporate deep grooves, while louvers adorn the One-77's hood in order to keep ample airflow on the 7.3L V-12 powerplant.

Now that the Aston Martin's approximately \$2 million One-77 has broken cover, expect more images and information to surface in the coming weeks.
